Reading

1 Read the text and complete the sentences.

What has got a large head, a big nose, thick fur and small round ears?

No, not a bear, a koala!

Koalas look like bears, but they aren't from the bear family. They belong to the same animal family as a kangaroo. These types of animals carry their babies in "pockets". Koala babies weigh only five or six grams when they are born, so they live in their mothers' "pockets" until they are six months old.

The koala's natural home is Australia and you won't find many koalas anywhere else, not even in zoos. Why? Well, koalas have got a very special diet. They eat leaves from eucalyptus trees, but they are very particular. In Australia, there are over 600 different types of eucalyptus trees, but koalas only eat the leaves from about 35 types of these trees. Koalas don't drink because they get all the water they need from the leaves. So if a koala doesn't find these leaves, it won't have food or water! These special trees are hard to grow outside Australia, so it's very difficult for zoos in other countries to keep these lovely animals.
